North Alabama's Leader in Workforce and Economic Development

Uniquely situated in north Alabama's high-technology corridor, Calhoun Community College exemplifies the community college mission at its best. The largest of the two-year institutions comprising the Alabama Community College System, Calhoun is recognized among the region's most successful economic and workforce development engines, providing educational and training opportunities to approximately 11,500 credit students, more than 3,500 non-credit students, and dozens of area business and industry which include the Tennessee Valley Authority, The Boeing Company, United Launch Alliance, 3M, Daikin, and Nucor Steel.

Calhoun's economic impact to the region is significant. A report from the Alabama Community College System indicated that the College's local economic impact is $279, 284,280, for a return on $1 investment (ROI) of 12:1, the highest among the state's 25 two-year colleges.

As an institution on the cutting edge of providing excellence in teaching and service, Calhoun is home to many of the state's most innovative, cutting-edge programs which include the Alabama Center for the Arts, a project in partnership with Athens State University; the Alabama Robotics Technology Park; and the Alabama Center for Excellence in Clean Energy Technology (ACECET).

Calhoun is preparing the workforce of the future.

Dear Friend,

Thank you for picking up a copy of the 2014-15 Guide to Huntsville/Madison County, A Smart Place to Live, Work and Play. In this publication, you will find a wealth of information on the people, events and places that drive our local economy and make the Huntsville Metropolitan Area such a dynamic business community. Whether you are new to the area or are a lifelong resident, this guide will show you many exciting and innovative aspects of our great region.

Filled with examples of what has built our strong and diverse economy, this guide highlights a variety of businesses. With technology as a driving force in our business community, you will read about places such as the Marshall Space Flight Center, Redstone Arsenal and Cummings Research Park. Small businesses and unique start-ups thrive here, too, such as award-winning craft beer breweries that are gaining national recognition. Our area continues to draw people from across the country because of excellent salaries and career opportunities as well as our high quality of life, low cost of living and a thriving arts and recreation community.

According to the 2010 U.S. Census, the Huntsville Metropolitan Statistical Area surged in growth to become Alabama's second largest metro. We are excited about that and the growth that is fueled by a vast array of industry, including aerospace, defense, biotechnology, computer science and advanced manufacturing.

The Chamber of Commerce is the lead economic development organization for Huntsville and Madison County, and it is our first priority to assist the community in economic growth by inviting new employers and helping existing industries expand. We are able to do this with the help of Chamber members and public partners investing in the Huntsville Regional Economic Growth Initiative (HREGI). This allows us to recruit specific industries, aid current employers in their expansion needs, promote the community's image on a national and global level, work with our local universities and colleges for economic and workforce development, and continue to create a platform of economic diversity.

The Chamber of Commerce is here to provide you with information and personalized service to meet your needs. For more information, please contact us at 256-535-2000 or visit our website at www.hsvchamber.org. When it comes to business and career opportunities, you will discover the truth in what we say: the sky is NOT the limit in Huntsville and Madison County!

CREATE YOUR SPACE

The new $58 million, five-story Intergraph headquarters in Madison is nearing completion. Located along the Interstate 565/Madison Boulevard corridor, the facility will house 1,100 employees in the 250,000-square-foot facility.

Big development happening all over Madison County

By Deborah Storey

Over the past year, developers have unveiled projects for Huntsville that will total more than a half-billion dollars.

One of the biggest announcements came from Remington Outdoor Co., which is investing $110 million in a new facility that will employ up to 2,000 in production and advance manufacturing. Officials said it will be the third-largest employer in Madison County. The plant is in the old Chrysler building at Wall Triana Highway and Electronics Boulevard.

DOWNTOWN

In April 2014, local developer Scott McLain announced a reboot of the Constellation development at one of the city's most visible intersections: Memorial Parkway and Clinton Avenue. SpringHill Suites, which opened there in 2011, has been the only tenant at the mostly vacant site of the former Heart of Huntsville Mall. The property is within walking distance of the city's main entertainment venue, the Von Braun Center.

McLain said the $178 million development will include new restaurants, shops, office space, two parking decks and 150 apartments. The anchor will be a luxury hotel. A pedestrian bridge across Pinhook Creek is in the design.

Some businesses at downtown Huntsville's new flagship development, the $100 million live-work-shop Twickenham Square, opened their doors in spring 2014, Homewood Suites hotel opened in March, and Publix in early May. Joining them will be 246 loft apartments at Artisan, five stories of office space, and Cajun Steamer Bar & Grill, Mei Wei and Taco Mama restaurants.

Another change on the horizon for downtown Huntsville is a $30 million apartment building at the corner of Jefferson Street and Holmes Avenue. In December 2013, the City Council gave developer Charlie Sealy III an option to lease the space for the project, which includes 20,000 square feet of retail and restaurant space.

City leaders are monitoring development plans at the old Coca-Cola plant at Monroe Street across Clinton Avenue from the Von Braun Center. A developer has an option for the nine-acre site but has not announced plans after the plant is demolished.

Remington®

The new Remington production facility will be the third-largest employer in Madison County.

Huntsville foodies were abuzz in February 2014 to learn that Whole Foods Market will be the anchor tenant in a 100,000-square-foot development at Bob Wallace Avenue and Memorial Parkway in the heart of the city. The site is near Huntsville High School and established neighborhoods, and not far from the Medical District. The $50 million Shops at Merchants Walk development will begin in summer and open in late 2015. City leaders expect the new center will spur more development along Memorial Parkway.

BOEING ADDITION

In a project announced in December 2013, Boeing will bring up to 400 jobs to Huntsville due to a restructuring of its Reseach and Technology Division. A new $6 million research center will be located at the Boeing offices at Redstone Gateway.

Also in west Huntsville, work continues on the $25 million new Belk location at Bridge Street Town Center near Cummings Research Park. The 170,000-square-foot store is expected to open in the fall of 2014.

SOUTH HUNTSVILLE

GBT Realty of Nashville will build a 240,000-square-foot mixed-use retail center on a 25-acre site by John Hunt Park near the Airport Road-Memorial Parkway intersection in south Huntsville.

In fall of 2013, Wal-Mart received a city building permit for a Supercenter at Drake Avenue and Memorial Parkway, off L&N Drive. The store's scheduled opening is autumn 2014.

Also in late 2013, Raymond Jones Jr. announced plans for a 400,000-square-foot shopping center on family land in Jones Valley. The upscale project on 127 acres will feature 19 retail parcels.

This Constellation site plan unveiled at a news conference in April 2014, shows the future layout of the $180 million mixed-use development in downtown Huntsville.

Twickenham: The Key to Huntsville's Downtown Rebirth

By Deborah Storey

Twickenham Square is a live-work-play result of Huntsville's downtown economic rebirth.

Three developers are combining efforts in the $100 million investment at the former site of the Councill Courts housing project.

As real estate experts say, location is key to success and Twickenham Square has one of the most desirable in town—adjacent to Huntsville Hospital's main campus, municipal offices and the high-income historic residential districts.

The development includes 100,000 square feet of office space in a five-story project called Twickenham Place developed by Triad Properties of Huntsville. Retail space includes the 33,000-square-foot Publix grocery store and up to four restaurants. Three have been announced: Cajun Steamer, Mei Wei and Taco Mama.

Birmingham-based Taco Mama specializes in burritos, fresh tacos and margaritas. It is scheduled to open in late summer of 2014 in the retail space closest to the parking garage across from Publix. Mei Wei is a fast-casual Asian eatery. Cajun Steamer will serve po-boys, oysters, Cajun-influenced salads, specialty cocktails and more when it opens in mid-summer 2014.

City workers, hospital employees or anyone looking to indulge in a manicure should enjoy the Beaute Nail Spa when it debuts in September near Publix. The Atlanta-based business will be the only full-service nail salon in downtown Huntsville, according to the affiliated commercial real estate firm Crunkleton and Associates.

Homewood Suites by Hilton was the first business to open at Twickenham Square. The 101-suite extended stay hotel is managed by PHD Hotels of Opelika and owned by Huntsville Hotels III. It includes a swimming pool, outdoor grill/patio and suites with full-service kitchens.

Publix at Twickenham Square, located at 310 Pelham Ave., celebrated its grand opening May 7, making it the first new restaurant in the downtown area in decades. At 33,000 square feet, the new location fits a more compact footprint than most Publix stores.

Artisan at Twickenham Square apartments opened June 1 with 185 one-bedroom units and 61 two-bedroom units. Average square footage is 832.

Twickenham Place office tower is located at St. Clair Avenue and Gallatin Street. Huntsville Hospital's clinical laboratory will fill about 1 1/2 floors of the building. The hospital is part owner of the tower and will connect via an elevated walkway.

City leaders and private developers announced the landmark "live-work-shop" Twickenham Square development in December 2012. Before the name was changed in the early 1800s, Huntsville was known as Twickenham.

Huntsville Mayor Tommy Battle said the project will contribute to a "unique urban lifestyle" vibe downtown. City leaders around the country cite recruiting young professionals as one of their top goals and those residents are known to favor a lively downtown where they live.

Ken Smith, director of research and information services at the Chamber of Commerce of Huntsville/Madison County, agreed that the new development will contribute to a vibrant atmosphere downtown. It is located next door to the city's largest non-defense public employer, he noted, which is Huntsville Hospital. (The hospital system employs roughly 7,000 people.)

The city will spend $9.8 million on a 920-space parking garage for the development with the top floor leased to the hospital for employees.

A smaller Publix adjacent to a parking deck may be new to Huntsville, but Smith said cities like Greenville, S.C., have similar "urban" grocery store settings.

Mayor Battle estimates Twickenham Square will generate $2.3 million annually in property, sales and liquor and lodging taxes, plus $1.6 million in sales tax on construction materials.

HUNTSVILLE arts

By Deborah Storey

Huntsville's arts scene is a rosy picture indeed. In just two years, The Arts Council Inc. has seen membership increase 200 percent.

Interest in the advocacy group reflects "a period of tremendous growth and vibrancy" in the arts community in Huntsville, said Arts Council Executive Director Allison Dillon-Jauken.

Anyone can "live and work full-time as an artist" these days in Huntsville, she said, or choose to pursue a full-time day job and play in a band or work in a studio by night.

The more than 200 members of the council include 57 arts and cultural organizations, 48 arts-related businesses and 129 professional artists and musicians. Nine local arts organizations are more than 50 years old.

"At the Arts Council, we have a vision for the future where we can compete with other mid-size cities" in the South as an arts attraction, Dillon-Jauken said. "We're already on our way."

In 2010-2011, attendance at local arts events was an estimated 384,000 in a city with a population of about 180,000. A one-year period included 717 paid and 138 free arts events, a council study found. Peripheral arts spending in the community was an estimated $9.45 million.

"An average 300 arts activities is a typical month," said Dillon-Jauken.

In addition to the thriving Lowe Mill studio setting and emerging downtown, she sees potential artsy hotspots along Triana Boulevard and Meridian Street as spinoffs from Merrimack Hall and the Lincoln Mill scene.

Roxy Roca keeps the crowd moving during their performance at the Concerts On The Dock at Lowe Mill Arts & Entertainment.

HIGHLIGHTS OF HUNTSVILLE ARTS:

LOWE MILL

The upstart in the city's arts community, this historic textile mill at 2211 Seminole Drive houses more than 100 working artisans and small businesses. Art shows, classes and free concerts on the back dock are fixtures on its annual calendar. During public hours visitors can see artists blowing glass, making fine jewelry, printing posters and more.

One of Huntsville Museum of Art's five most valuable pieces of artwork. Ibex 925 sterling: Gianmaria Buccellati, designer, 1998.

HUNTSVILLE MUSEUM OF ART

It claims one of the most impressive locations in the city at 300 Church St. in Big Spring International Park downtown. Thirteen galleries showcase exhibits all year, and the permanent collection includes more than 3,000 pieces. Popular touring exhibits have included "A Taste for Splendor: Russian Imperial and European Treasures from the Hillwood Museum" and "Land of the Winged Horsemen: Art in Poland." The museum also offers art classes, programs and lectures.

HUNTSVILLE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

This professional group can trace its origins to the arrival of the German rocket team around 1950. Many of them loved music and joined other local enthusiasts to organize a symphony in 1954, with the first rehearsals to come a year later. Now the oldest continually operating professional orchestra in Alabama, HSO provides education programs as well as a popular concert series.

Jaison Thomas encourages his 22-month-old daughter to try stroking the strings of the Celtic harp that was part of the 'Instrument Petting Zoo' offered prior to The Huntsville Symphony Orchestra's Free Family Concert at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center

COMMUNITY BALLET ASSOCIATION

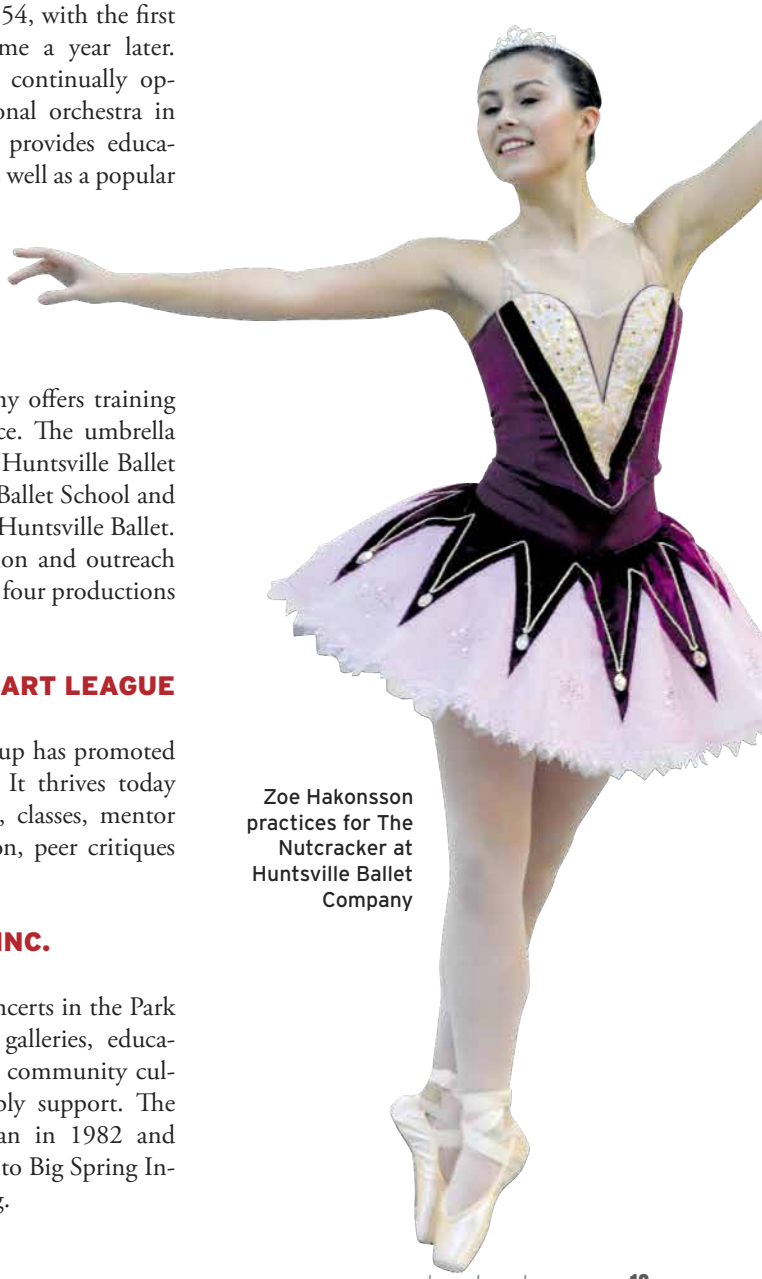
The resident company offers training for professional dance. The umbrella organization includes Huntsville Ballet Company, Huntsville Ballet School and the Women's Guild of Huntsville Ballet. CBA provides education and outreach programs and at least four productions each year.



Zoe Hakonsson practices for The Nutcracker at Huntsville Ballet Company

HUNTSVILLE ART LEAGUE

Since 1957, this group has promoted interest in the visual arts. It thrives today with its own gallery space, classes, mentor program, juried competition, peer critiques and more.

THE ARTS COUNCIL INC.

Core programs include Concerts in the Park each summer downtown, galleries, education, the Create Huntsville community cultural plan and arts assembly support. The Panoply Arts Festival began in 1982 and continues to attract crowds to Big Spring International Park each spring.

SPACES

In 2010, the Arts Council developed SPACES as a biennial sculpture installation. Madison joined the movement in 2012. SPACES Sculpture Trail project became a public art display that now includes 36 sculptures at locations throughout Huntsville and Madison.

BROADWAY THEATRE LEAGUE

This venerable organization dates to 1959. Shows presented at the Von Braun Center reflect a wide range of interests, such as Hello, Dolly!, Flashdance–The Musical and Green Day's American Idiot. Some BTL patrons have been subscribers for decades.

DESE RESEARCH, INC.

Technical Excellence and Innovation

Mr. Michael Kirkpatrick
President

Established in 1982, DESE Research Inc. has established an experienced and distinguished team of scientists and engineers which constitute the corporate core capabilities. The core competencies are depicted on the pictures below. Systems engineering projects have addressed Ballistic Missile Defense (BMD) and Theater Missile Defense (TMD) systems including, threat assessment, mission analysis, concept definition, effectiveness analysis, and Battle Management/Command, Control, and Communications (BM/C3). The core team has more than 2 centuries of experience in Integration and analysis activities. Our experience in integrating weapon system models ranges from small-scale, cutting edge technology solutions to large-scale, disparate systems. The breadth of our experience encompasses a range of software models, HWIL (hardware-the-loop), databases and Enterprise Architecture tools applied over a wide variety of NASA programs and DOD weapons programs from ground combat to short-range tactical missiles; ballistic missile defense, to space-based systems to installation infrastructure. Our integration expertise extends beyond integrating existing tools – DESE has developed large-scale simulation architectures for engineering design and collaboration. DESE experience includes IV&V of simulations, systems engineering, design, analysis, and integration for a variety of military systems. Model and data base integration is accomplished with a DESE developed DIGITAL GLUE product which permits integration without changes to source code or database structure. Core capabilities also include cyber security and supply chain risk management.

From Preschool to Institutes of Higher Learning, Huntsville Has the Smarts!

By Kimberly Ballard

Residential realtors throughout Madison County agree that quality and accessibility to good schools are the foremost considerations for newcomers relocating to Huntsville and the surrounding area. "Engineering drives Huntsville's economic development," said Huntsville Mayor Tommy Battle. "We have the highest per capita concentration of engineers in the country at two times the national average, and our background in technology brings engineers to Huntsville." With that many smart people moving here, providing a quality education for their kids is mandatory and all three—Huntsville City Schools, Madison County Schools, and Madison City Schools—live up to expectations.

Groundbreaking ceremony for the new Huntsville City Schools' Jemison-McNair Campus in northwest Huntsville.

Huntsville/Madison County have three of the top ranked high schools in the state of Alabama: Number 7 ranked Virgil Grissom High School located in South Huntsville; #8 ranked New Century Technology High School located in the heart of downtown; and #10 ranked Bob Jones High School in the city of Madison. All three join Columbia High School located in Cummings Research Park (CRP), and Huntsville High School in maintaining college readiness scores above the national average according to U.S. News & World Report. Furthermore, out of five Madison County Schools, Buckhorn, Hazel Green, and Sparkman High Schools also rank above the national average in college preparedness according to the same report.

Approved for a combined capital plan to bring $297 million in new and renovated schools to Huntsville, Madison, and Madison County in late 2013, $147 million of that commitment comes from Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) funds. The remaining $150 million comes from capital funds invested by the school districts. Of the $147 million, Huntsville received $64.7 million; Madison County received $55.9 million; and Madison City Schools, $26.4 million.

HUNTSVILLE CITY SCHOOLS

The Huntsville City School System consists of 24 elementary schools; four magnet schools for elementary, middle and high school students; 11 middle schools; and seven high schools.

"Working in the school system anywhere is a lot of responsibility but you have to do your homework, think things through, make a case for why what you are proposing is better than doing nothing, or continuing whatever was done before," said Huntsville City Schools Superintendent, Dr. Casey Wardynski.

The superintendent is rightfully proud that the Huntsville School System is ranked in the country's biggest 100. "To put it into perspective, Kansas City has 18,000 kids; Huntsville has 24,000. New York has eight million. Chicago, 800,000," said Wardynski.

"With the money to build new schools, we are renovating, building, and even replacing some structures while at the same time, retiring 700,000 square feet of overly large schools, replacing them with right size schools."

According to Wardynski, the days when sales, property and income taxes funded smaller class sizes, more tutors and remediation is gone, therefore the school system has to be more effective. "In business, when technology took hold, we redesigned our work habits so we are always engaged, never really disconnected from work; but with kids, when the bell rings, it is over. We needed to make better use of our 5½ hours of academic daytime."

He said Huntsville City Schools are the only fully digital system in the country. "We have 20,000 laptop computers for third through twelfth graders and 6,000 iPads for pre-K through second graders to take home. Homework is now graded digitally, so teachers can focus on creating higher-level strategies for students, who for instance, are struggling with math or having problems in other areas. That makes teachers more effective."

MADISON COUNTY SCHOOLS

The Madison County School System is one of the largest in the state. When families from major metropolitan cities relocate to Huntsville, they often choose quieter, suburban parts of the City in which to settle. To live "out in the county" rarely requires more than a 17-minute drive into the city for work or school.

Madison County Schools focus on technology and on expanding the district's career technical programs and pre-kindergarten curricula.

The County learned last year that it was receiving $55.9 million for new and expanded facilities to keep up with BRAC-related student growth; $46 million of those funds are earmarked for a new high school in Monrovia, a highly developed area located adjacent to CRP, and scheduled to open in 2017.

MADISON CITY SCHOOLS

The Madison City School system is one of the fastest growing in the state serving nearly 10,000 students. After separating from the Madison County School System in 1998, it consists of two high schools, two middle schools, and seven elementary schools, with an operating budget of $60 million.

Madison is an affluent suburban community linked to Huntsville via Cummings Research Park, where a vast majority of the residents work in highly technical jobs with companies likes SCI, Intergraph, Boeing, NASA and the U.S. Army Aviation and Missile Command. Nearly 70 percent of Madison residents hold bachelor's or advanced degrees, so they demand excellence in education for their children. Test scores on national standardized tests are above the national average at all Madison schools; and they have active support for school functions and activities including theatre, music, and sports; and parents actively participating in booster clubs, PTA, and school volunteer programs.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

There are currently 53 private schools of varying grade levels and curriculum in Madison County. According to the Huntsville Madison Private Schools Association that represents over 20 private, religiously affiliated, or independent schools in Huntsville and Madison, private schools provide a variety of education alternatives, including day care, pre-kindergarten, and kindergarten through grade 12.

Most people see the private school alternative as offering smaller class sizes to ensure a greater degree of individual attention; they demand a higher level of academic performance; and they usually promote moral values and discipline in a strict atmosphere.

Many of Madison County's private schools also address learning disabilities such as the Greengate School for Dyslexia and the Rise School for developmental disabilities; faith-based preferences like Covenant Classical School; and even programs for troubled teens like Pinnacle School's Elk River Treatment Program.

Most of Madison County's private school environments also provide secure learning environments that require limited access to modern, high-tech facilities and administer standardized testing programs, such as the Stanford Achievement Test (SAT), to evaluate the effectiveness of their teaching and curriculum. Most also require state-certified teachers and are accredited by the Alabama Board of Education.

COLLEGES & UNIVERSITIES

According to Mayor Tommy Battle, the educational opportunities offered by North Alabama's colleges and universities are the driving force behind Huntsville's engineering superiority. "Our institutes of higher learning like UAH, Alabama A&M, Calhoun, Drake State and Oakwood University are key to providing a sustainable engineering workforce here in Huntsville," he said. "Those schools are preparing the future workforce in new areas of expertise like in cyber and energy, while filling the pipeline with talented young people to replace today's workforce as they age out and retire."

University of Alabama Huntsville (UAH)

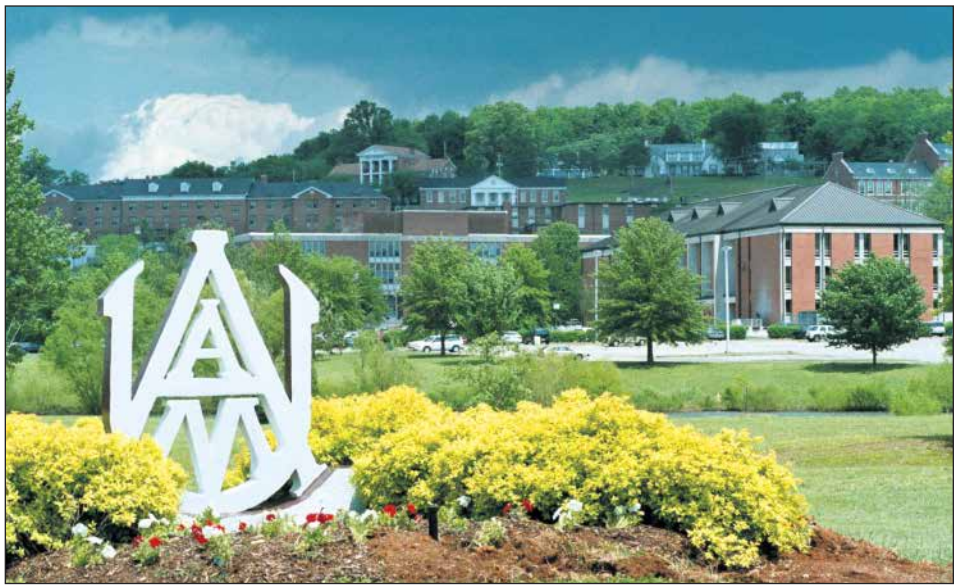
Few U.S. college programs have direct access to technological analysis, testing, research, and development like UAH. Surrounded on all sides by Fortune 500 companies, engineering firms, Redstone Arsenal (RSA) with its U.S. Army research and development centers, and NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center (MSFC), capable engineering graduates do not have to look far to find work after graduation.

At any given time, UAH's fully accredited College of Engineering (COE) enrolls about 1,800 students in its undergraduate program with nearly 600 enrolled in the graduate program. UAH's COE has accredited undergraduate engineering degree programs in mechanical and aerospace; chemical, which includes biotech; electrical including industrial & systems; computer and software; and civil engineering. They also offer masters and doctorate degrees in all of the above.

The Department of Chemical and Materials Engineering offers post-graduate research leading to a master of science in engineering degree, while the doctor of philosophy degree is available through the materials science Ph.D. program, the biotechnology science and Engineering Ph.D. Program or the Mechanical engineering Ph.D. program has an option in chemical engineering.

According to Dr. Jennifer English, Associate Dean & Professor in UAH's COE, "Engineering is an interdisciplinary field with many specializations available. The first two years of undergraduate study at UAH gives a student a bird's eye view over the wall. During this time they learn to talk the language of all engineers, and with faculty advisors helping them narrow their talents and interests, by the third year, the retention rate for graduating has greatly increased."

With both short-term internships and co-operative employment opportunities with companies throughout the city where students both work and attend school fulltime, studying any of the multidisciplines of engineering at UAH offers a positive job outlook for graduates.



A view of stormy skies over the Alabama A&M campus.

Alabama A&M University

As the new Dean in the College of Engineering, Technology and Physical Sciences at Alabama A&M University, Dr. Chance Glenn, Sr. has wasted no time in growing all aspects of A&M's status in the engineering disciplines. From developing a new unified student success and achievement effort focused on student retention, to building a community connection advisory board to strengthen partnerships with technology companies all over North Alabama to enhance their internship opportunities and co-operative programs, AAMU completed a notice of intent with the Alabama Commission on Higher Education (ACHE). It is applying to the State of Alabama for both a degreed biotechnical engineering program and a nuclear engineering program.

Equipped with high tech equipment including a Mach 5 supersonic wind tunnel for aerodynamic studies, class 1000 clean rooms for microelectronic circuits and device fabrication, and a particle accelerator, AAMU is located less than five miles from CRP, RSA, and MSFC.

The school stresses the importance of STEM (science, technology, engineering, math) projects, and hands-on research in nuclear and material sciences. Alabama A&M's CET&PS Program consists of accredited four-year programs in civil engineering, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, and computer science. It also offers four-year programs in physics, chemistry, and mathematics. All of these programs lead to a bachelors of science degree in the specified discipline. Students may pursue a five-year master of science degree in physics, computer science, or technology, and elect to apply for the masters of engineering degree in material engineering, and a Ph.D. in applied physics.

"Research in nuclear is happening here and now," said Dr. Glenn. "Scientific applications create technology and at A&M, we are in the thick of it, building bridges to help our students across the threshold."

Calhoun Community College Aerospace Training Center.

Calhoun Community College

Calhoun Community College is the largest feeder school for UAH's engineering program offering both a two-year technology program and transfer program that leads to a 4-year degree in many engineering disciplines.

"A two-year program like Calhoun offers students an associate of science degree in pre-engineering, which provides a seamless transition into a program at any of the four-year colleges," said Janet Kincherlow-Martin, executive assistant to the president for public information, community relations, and special events. "Financial limitations make Calhoun a more affordable option since it is significantly less expensive than a four-year college."

Students can take their 100 and 200-level introductory engineering classes including statistics, calculus, physics and chemistry, which lay the foundations for baccalaureate degrees in aerospace, bioengineering and biomedical, chemical, civil, computer sciences and software, electrical and systems engineering, industrial and manufacturing engineering, mechanical and nuclear.

According to Kincherlow-Martin, in two years, students have a better idea of what area of engineering they want to pursue, and although enrollment is higher than at UAH or A&M, the classes are smaller and students receive individualized attention.

JF Drake State

In a commitment to workforce development for the Huntsville community, JF Drake State's new electrical engineering technology programs now let students transfer certain professional-level classes without penalty. "We essentially revamped our former industrial and electronics program into a better program," said Karl Henry, electronics instructor and divisional chair for engineering technology at Drake State. "We now have an electrical engineering and computer engineering articulation with UAH; an electrical engineering technology articulation with Alabama A&M; a bachelor of science agreement in technology at Athens State; and an articulation with Oakwood University that ensures students don't lose earned credit if they transfer or take classes at Oakwood." Furthermore, students with an associate's degree, regardless of their program of study, will not lose credits or coursework.

Oakwood University

Although Oakwood University is a four-year school, it offers a three-year transitional engineering program to UAH with dual degrees in any engineering discipline UAH offers.

"Many engineering students just want the Oakwood experience," said Kathleen Dobbins, Dean of Arts & Sciences and Chair of Mathematics and Computer Science. "They can take the general engineering classes like chemistry, statistics, engineering graphics, biological science, math, and computer science. After the third year, they can transfer everything to UAH and in two years at UAH, they are awarded dual five-year bachelor degrees in applied mathematics and engineering." From there students can pursue a masters or doctorate in any discipline UAH offers.

Visionary health care for a dynamic community

By Anna Thibodeaux

Quality, innovation and complete services are the hallmarks of North Alabama's dynamic health care offerings.

Huntsville Hospital, St. Jude Clinic at Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children, Crestwood Medical Center, Clearview Cancer Institute, and UAB School of Medicine Huntsville Regional Medical Campus all contribute to the area's healthy offerings. Latest additions to the medical community include the Birmingham VA Medical Center's $40 million Huntsville Outpatient Clinic.

Additionally, since 2013, the area's health care options expanded with the opening of the $71 million Madison Hospital, a 60-bed facility, and Athens-Limestone Hospital, also under Huntsville Hospital management, completed emergency room renovations and began work on a $9.3 million 40-bed long-term acute care hospital. An expansion of the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB) medical residency program with Huntsville Hospital added 24 residents in internal medicine.

Huntsville Hospital is among the area's major health care providers with 941 beds serving North Alabama and southern Tennessee.

Founded in 1895, the hospital is governed by the Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville and is the second-largest hospital in Alabama. Major services include a nationally acclaimed cardiovascular program, Level One trauma center, advanced surgical capabilities including orthopedics and neurosurgery, medical and oncology services, the state's largest maternity program, a free-standing pediatric hospital (Huntsville Hospital for Women & Children), a network of primary care and specialty physicians and an array of outpatient and diagnostic services.

The Huntsville Hospital Health System—which includes facilities in Huntsville, Madison, Athens, Decatur, Moulton, Red Bay and Sheffield—is the fifth-largest publicly owned hospital system in the nation, representing more than 1,800 beds and 12,000 employees.

"Our health system allows our partner hospitals to continue to provide their respective communities with locally owned healthcare services, while at the same time having access to the strength of a larger facility like ours," said CEO David Spillers. "It's proven to be an excellent model for them and for us."

Crestwood Medical Center is a 150-bed, full-service acute care hospital in south Huntsville with about 1,000 health care professionals. Crestwood's honors include Tier 1 Facility status from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Alabama.

"Crestwood's first priority is providing patients with high-quality, safe and effective care through proven practices that improve outcomes and the patient experience," said Dr. Pam Hudson, CEO of Crestwood Medical Center. "We are proud to be named to the Joint Commission's list of Top Performers for the past two years. The credit goes to our medical staff, employees and volunteers whose hard work every day makes this possible."

Crestwood Wound & Hyperbaric Medicine offers latest outpatient clinical wound care treatments using hyperbaric oxygen therapy, bioengineered tissues and biosynthetics. The ALS Care Clinic at Crestwood is the only interdisciplinary care program for ALS management in North Alabama. The facility also offers robotic-assisted techniques in general surgery, urology and otolaryngoly. In July 2013, a surgical team at Crestwood performed the first da Vinci Single-Site hysterectomy in Alabama by removing the patient's uterus with one small incision in the belly button. A recent Madison location opened in 2013, which offers imaging services, digital mammography, lab services and a sleep disorder clinic.

Clearview Cancer Institute's main location sits high atop Russel Hill in Huntsville.

As one of the region's major cancer centers, services include medical oncology, laboratory, pharmacy, imaging, social work, genetics and research trial services. Other offices are located off Airport Road and in Decatur, Scottsboro and Athens.

The St. Jude Clinic at Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children has been rocognized as one of the Top 50 pediatric programs in the nation. Below, kids at Hampton Cove Christian Academy raise money for St. Jude's Cancer Research for Children with a tricycle race. The school has raised over $75,000 over the 18 years the tricycle race has been going on.

Established more than two decades ago, the institute remains on the cutting edge of cancer treatment technology.

Clearview's team of more than 150 oncology professionals includes board-certified nurses, radiation therapists and radiation physicists; pharmacists, research and transplant coordinators, genetic counselors and social workers.

The St. Jude Clinic at Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children is north Alabama's first pediatric cancer care and hematology clinic.

"In Huntsville, we help extend the mission of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital," said Dr. Carolyn Russo, medical director of the St. Jude Affiliate Clinic. "We use the same treatment protocols and collaborate daily with our caregivers in Memphis to provide seamless care to our patients."

Established in 2002, the facility offers 45 beds for general pediatrics and 11 beds for pediatric intensive care. It is one of three dedicated children's hospitals in Alabama offering comprehensive pediatric health care services and the only Pediatric Intensive Care and Pediatric Emergency Room in northern Alabama. Huntsville's pediatric program has been recognized as one of the Top 50 in the nation. It is one of only six St. Jude affiliate clinics nationwide.

Areas of treatment include hematology (sickle cell anemia, hemophilia, thalassemia, anemia and platelet disorder) and oncology (leukemia, lymphoma, solid tumor, brain tumor and retinoblastoma).

The new U.S. Department of Veteran's Affairs' outpatient clinic in Huntsville is expected to open by mid-2015 near Clearview Cancer Institute.

"This is a visionary move for us," said Jeffrey Hester, chief of public and consumer affairs for the Birmingham Veterans Affairs Medical Center. "This is a new, state-of-the-art facility that will be great for our patients and will be very accessible for our patients."

The 47,800-square-foot clinic will offer primary care, mental health, audiology, optometry and radiology services, plus an on-site pharmacy. It will also showcase the VA's "Telehealth" program—video hookups that will allow veterans in Huntsville to be seen remotely by medical specialists in other cities and states.

Hester said growth in the North Alabama veteran population following the latest round of military base realignment and closures made the new facility a necessity. Current clinics on Governors Drive in Huntsville and Madison Boulevard in Madison treated more than 13,000 patients last year. VA officials expect the new clinic to serve about 15,000 patients a year.

UAB Medicine Huntsville is the northern Alabama anchor of the UAB Health System, and is the largest physician practice in north Alabama and the only academic multi-specialty facility in this part of the state. It is the primary ambulatory training site for 36 family medicine resident physicians who care for patients of all ages, including children. Resident physicians are physicians receiving a three-year program of specialty training in family medicine. The center is home to an active research program involving the assessment, education and treatment of chronic illnesses.

The health center includes 30 faculty physicians providing care in five specialties including family practice, internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, and psychiatry.

Since 1974, 828 students have graduated from the UAB School of Medicine after training at the Huntsville Campus. Today, Huntsville faculty train 70 third- and fourth-year medical students and 60 residents, 36 in family medicine and 24 in internal medicine. The clinical services that support the medical education programs average 85,500 patient encounters each year.

UAB is an internationally renowned research university and academic medical center and the state of Alabama's largest employer, with some 23,000 employees and an economic impact exceeding $5 billion annually on the state.

The university has had record enrollment five consecutive years (18,568 in fall 2013), equipping students for 21st century careers and growing intellectual capital for the state and region. Beyond campus, UAB continues to collaborate effectively with its partners statewide, including University of Alabama-Huntsville, NASA and HudsonAlpha—to advance education, health care, quality of life and a robust technology-based economy.

"UAB discoveries don't just save lives—they fuel Alabama's economic growth," said UAB President Ray L. Watts. "The university is the state's largest single-site employer, with an annual impact exceeding $5 billion. To put that another way, for every dollar Alabama invests in UAB, we return more than $20 through jobs and economic development."

UAB Medicine Huntsville is the northern Alabama anchor of the UAB Health System, and is the largest physician practice in north Alabama. It is the primary ambulatory training site for family medicine resident physicians who care for patients of all ages, including children.

Ongoing Capital Improvements Keep the Port of Huntsville Always Focused on the Future

By Kimberly Ballard

In 1967, Huntsville converted 7,000 acres of cotton fields into the Huntsville Jetport. Originally designed to provide better access to and from Washington, DC, to accommodate the need for interaction between aerospace industry professionals, it is doubtful even the economic visionaries of the 1960s couldn't have foreseen the ongoing evolution of Huntsville's little airstrip into the international cargo waypoint, regional logistics hub, and economic development apparatus the Port of Huntsville has become.

Today the Port of Huntsville consists of the Huntsville International Airport (HSV), the International Intermodal Center (IIC), the Jetplex Industrial Park; Foreign Trade Zone #83; Signature Flight Support; the Four Points by Sheraton Hotel; and the Sunset Landing Golf Course.

HSV provides air travel to over 1.2 million passengers a year with nonstop service to Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Houston, and both Dulles and National airports in Washington, DC. As part of massive preparations for economic growth, the Huntsville-Madison County Airport Authority approved a five-year, $92 million capital improvement project for the Port of Huntsville to renovate, upgrade, improve, and expand every aspect of the airport and its supporting facilities. Starting with a new $21 million, 219-foot tall control tower, HSV spent $60 million on terminal improvements. That included a 5,000-square-foot concession area on the main concourse; a new public waiting area outside security where friends and family could meet passengers; and a new parking deck and 6-lane toll booth plaza to improve traffic flow in and out of the airport.

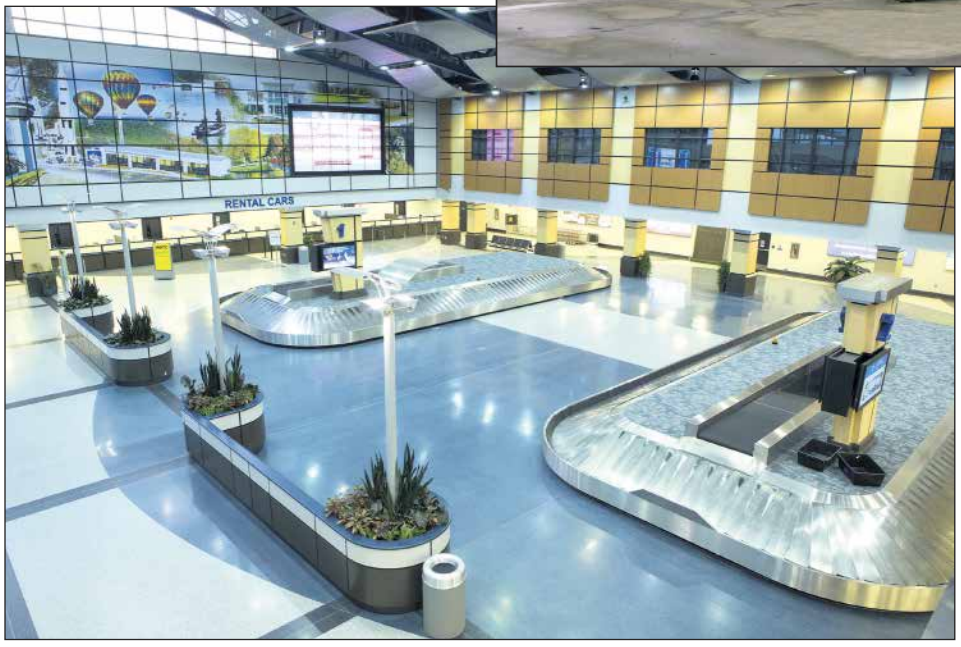
The project culminated in a $26 million baggage claim expansion that quadrupled the size of the original area, and features contemporary vaulted, arched ceilings and a bright glass facade with lots of natural light. It has three underground-fed baggage carrousels; a second elevated crosswalk to the parking deck; five escalators; a glass elevator; two state-of-the-art jumbotrons; new ground transportation and rental car area; and expanded curbside loading and unloading.

In the past year alone, HSV has made additional technological improvements. Passengers can now use electronic boarding passes to check in with their smartphones from the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) checkpoint. Because Huntsville caters heavily to the business traveler, they invested $63,000 on electronic charging stations throughout the concourse and public waiting area so passengers can reload their portable devices now that passengers can use them during all phases of flight.

Other improvements include redesigning the roadway entrances to the gates and terminal; installing a new guardrail system to keep motorists from unsafely using the median as a turnaround; and the installation of shared-use gate counters for the airlines on the concourse. They even opened an Enterprise Rent-A-Car location, new to HSV.

The IIC services a high-tech air cargo market, led by Huntsville's international air carrier, Panalpina, who operates 10 nonstop flights a week at HSV from Europe, Mexico, Hong Kong and Brazil. The Huntsville-Madison County Airport Authority approved a $65 million construction contract for expanding the IIC, with $13.3 million going towards upgrading facilities to accommodate Panalpina's new Boeing B747-800 freighter cargo jet. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) certified HSV for the jet, in spite of being the smallest of 21 airports to receive the certification. It puts HSV in the same league with Chicago's O'Hare International, Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International, Miami International, and John F. Kennedy International in New York.

The new Boeing 747-800 Panalpina is able to carry 20 more tons of cargo on each flight than its predecessor. The nose opens up to allow loading and unloading of cargo.



New baggage claim area.

As part of a 10-year, $85 million budget to improve runways and taxiways, they spent $27.8 million to renovate the west runway and adjacent taxiways to accommodate the B747-800 freighters; and $15.7 million to improve its east runway with widened, strengthened pavement and better lighting and signage.

bution centers. The designation of Foreign Trade Zone #83 and on-site U.S. Customs offers many substantial benefits to international manufacturers, expanding Maintenance, Repair and Operations (MRO), and distribution operations.

The Port of Huntsville also operates Signature Flight Support, providing numerous operations to general, business and commercial aviation customers including fueling, maintenance, cleaning, and deicing services; baggage and ground handling; counter operations, concierge, catering, and lav cart services; pilot and executive support services; private hangars; and charter service for corporate and leisure travel.

The Four Points by Sheraton Hotel and the Sunset Landing Golf Course are located onsite to provide comfortable and affordable travel accommodations, meals, and activities for short and long-term travelers.

In Huntsville/Madison, Parks Are Abundant

Research abounds on the benefits of parks and "greenspace." The Trust for Public Land's Center for City Park Excellence has research to prove parks draw visitors who spend money. Proximity to parks increases home values and increases tax revenue. Greenspaces capture rainwater and runoff and reduce stormwater management costs. Plant life helps clean the air and reduce pollution costs. But citizens benefit most from having a park nearby. In a time when obesity rates are on the rise, having nearby greenspace can help promote physical and mental well-being. Finding a park is not a problem for those who live in Huntsville and Madison. Between the two cities, there are more than 80 areas to play, relax or get away from it all just minutes from most homes. Huntsville has devoted more than 3,000 acres to parks and greenspace. From big city recreation facilities to neighborhood parks, there is plenty to choose from in both Huntsville and Madison.

TOP 10 REASONS TO DO BUSINESS IN HUNTSVILLE/ MADISON COUNTY

An art festival draws a crowd downtown.

1. LOW BUSINESS OPERATING COSTS

The costs associated with doing business in Alabama rank below the national average and costs in Huntsville/Madison County are typically lower than those of other major metropolitan areas.

2. CONVENIENT LOCATION

Huntsville/Madison County is geographically near the center of the southeastern United States with easy interstate access to other cities and surrounding states. The Huntsville International Airport is the largest commercial airport in north Alabama, serving over 1.2 million passengers annually.

3. DYNAMIC POPULATION GROWTH

More than 431,000 people call the Huntsville Metropolitan Area home and it has been ranked as one of the Top 30 fastest-growing major metro areas in the country.

4. OUTSTANDING QUALITY OF LIFE

Huntsville/Madison County is consistently recognized by national magazines as a top place to live, work and raise a family.

5. LOW COST OF LIVING

Area residents enjoy a cost of living that is well below the national average.

6. RECREATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

Nestled between the Tennessee River and the Appalachian Mountains, the area provides residents and visitors a host of outdoor recreational opportunities, including hiking, camping, fishing, water sports and golf. The U.S. Space and Rocket Museum, the Huntsville Botanical Gardens and other attractions draw thousands of tourists annually who contribute to the local economy.

7. REAL ESTATE VALUE

The metropolitan area offers a variety of housing options that represent excellent value at prices well below the U.S. median home price.

8. SKILLED WORKFORCE

Huntsville/Madison County is renowned for its highly-educated workforce. Employees are available to meet the needs of the area's primary industries: defense, aerospace, life sciences, information technology and advanced manufacturing. The area has one of the highest concentrations of engineers in the nation, along with a significant number of residents holding four-year and advanced degrees in computer science, mathematics, physics and other scientific disciplines.

9. TECHNOLOGY AND INNOVATION

Since the 1950s when Dr. Wernher von Braun helped launch Huntsville's reputation as "The Rocket City," this area has been on the cutting edge of technology. Today, Huntsville/Madison County is winning accolades as a hot-spot for technology and research. Cummings Research Park is the second largest research and technology park in the United States, bringing together Fortune 500 companies, local and international high tech companies, U.S. space and defense agencies, a business incubator and higher education.

10. EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

Supporting the area's reputation as a science and technology center, Huntsville and Madison County's award-winning schools help students develop the skills to carry them into the workforce with a wide range of educational opportunities, including magnet and career tech programs. Huntsville/Madison County is also home to several colleges offering two- and four-year degrees, along with graduate-level courses.

How to Start Doing Business in Huntsville/Madison County

THE CITY OF HUNTSVILLE

The City of Huntsville requires a business license, also known as a Privilege License, for:

- Commercial-based businesses in the City of Huntsville
- Residential-based businesses in the City of Huntsville
- Businesses not physically located in Huntsville if any of the following apply: sales reps or employees solicit business in Huntsville, deliveries are made in Huntsville via a company vehicle, property is leased in Huntsville or repair, maintenance, construction or installation services are performed in Huntsville.

Businesses in any of these categories must complete the Annual Privilege License Approval Application, available from the City of Huntsville Clerk-Treasurer's Department or online at www.huntsvilleal.gov/clerk/priv_license_commercial.pdf. They must also submit the appropriate license fees and the Annual Privilege Tax Return form. The license is good for one calendar year with renewals each January. Additionally, businesses must comply with zoning regulations and pass any required inspections.

MADISON COUNTY

The State of Alabama and Madison County require all persons, firms, or corporations that engage in or transact any trade, business, commerce, occupation, vocation, or profession for gain or profit to pay a license fee. Businesses may need a State License, a Madison County License, or a combination of the two depending on the nature of the business. A business license should be obtained prior to the opening of a business. License fees are determined by the exact nature and type of business. Some licenses require State Regulatory Permits in order to issue, such as auto dealers, food establishments, and air conditioning contractors. State and Madison County business licenses are valid for a fiscal year beginning October 1 and ending September 30 of the following year.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF HUNTSVILLE/MADISON COUNTY:

The Chamber of Commerce of Huntsville/Madison County offers a number of resources to help owners establish and grow their business. Services offered include:

- An environment in which business owners can network and expand personal and professional connections
- Free or low-cost marketing and training opportunities
- Promotion of the business and the community through the Chamber website and media activities.
- Advocating for area businesses.

The Chamber of Commerce of Huntsville-Madison County's 28th Annual Small Business Awards. Cepeda Systems and Software Analysis, Inc. wins the Technology category.

Please check our events calendar and website for a current list of activities, benefits and services available at the Chamber. We invite you to stop by our office where our doors are always open to you.

What I know:

I know that broadening our aerospace base with biomedical, energy, and materials requires a strong management team and a talented crew.

I know that partnerships between small and large businesses are vital to the success of new technologies in an increasingly competitive environment.

I know that to raise twin boys you really need two sets of parents.

I know that Rolls-Royce's purchase of CFDRC's patent for low-emission fuel injectors is good for both businesses and the environment.

I know when you develop cutting edge technology in as many areas as we do, intellectual property (IP) is critical for continued success.

I know you must engage a law firm that works closely with you to protect your IP strategically.

I know that Bradley Arant Boult Cummings LLP has the requisite skills and experience for such IP ventures.

That's what I know.

There is Always Something Out of this World Happening at Redstone Arsenal

By Kimberly Ballard

About the time Dr. Wernher von Braun and a team of rocket scientists transformed Huntsville from the Watercress Capital of the World to the Rocket City and converted dozens of acres of cotton fields into a technological breeding ground for NASA and Marshall Space Flight Center (MSFC), someone at the time was overheard saying, "It's coming, and we are ready." Well, it came and we were.

Redstone Arsenal is an active sponsor and participant in dozens of community-wide projects and events from picnics and parades to sports competitions and holiday celebrations. They engage the community in technological breakthroughs; support scientific innovation at local colleges and small businesses; and they promote economic development efforts throughout North Alabama. RSA is the catalyst for nearly 20 major international manufacturing companies employing over 18,000 workers; nearly 50 Fortune 500 companies; dozens of foreign-based companies; and Washington Technology's Top 100 Federal Prime Contractors including Artist concept of Space Launch System (SLS) launching.

Raytheon, Boeing, Northrop Grumman, and Lockheed Martin with combined contracts totaling nearly $38 billion.

Today, Redstone Arsenal is one of the Department of Defense's (DoD) most strategic technological assets, employing over 35,000 civilian and military personnel, occupying over 38,000 acres with 19 million square-feet of building space, and equipped with unprecedented technological resources. Managing over $100 billion dollars in annual federal budgets, over a dozen of the government's largest commands, agencies and offices reside there.

SPACE LAUNCH SYSTEMS

MSFC in Huntsville is leading the development of the next advanced, heavy-lift launch vehicle known as Space Launch Systems or SLS. These systems will carry humans, equipment, cargo, and scientific payloads on new missions beyond low-Earth orbit. They are constantly working to develop safe but affordable vehicles and systems that ensure astronauts are living and working safely and comfortably in the harsh space environment; while preparing the way for human and robotic excursions to points all across the solar system.

An aggressive construction schedule began summer 2014 to build two new test article stands for testing the structural integrity of the core stage of NASA's next generation SLS heavy lift vehicle.

The first, known as Building #4693, is a twin-tower high-rise that will house the Hydrogen (LH2) Tank test article which will be suspended between the two columns. Built on top of an historic stand where MSFC tested the original F-1 engine that powered the Saturn V, the new edifice has the ability to withstand megaton forces. It has what looks like a roof and a structural crosshead that can be raised and lowered like an elevator. The second stand, Building #4697, is squat and L-shaped and will house the Liquid Oxygen (LOX) tank test article.

Tim Gautney, MSFC Team Lead for SLS Core Stage Testing said test stands for rocket launch testing are not built anywhere in the country on a regular basis. "We haven't built new testing facilities in a long time," he said. "We tend to reuse what we already have and modify it, morph it into use for the next project. We didn't have a test stand we could morph into with SLS because the loads are so large. The difference in size and shape of the two test articles—the LH2 tank being much taller than the LOX tank—required two new test stands."

NASA's Super Guppy, a wide-bodied cargo aircraft, landed at the Redstone Army Airfield near Huntsville, on March 26, 2014 with a special delivery: an innovative composite rocket fuel tank. At right: Tank being placed in the test stand.

The Super Guppy Delivers a Big New Fish

Aero Spaceline's amazing Super Guppy delivered an innovative composite cryogenic fuel tank to Redstone Arsenal this past spring. The liquid hydrogen tank is the largest ever made for heavy-lift launch vehicle testing. Installed at MSFC's test stand building #4699, the 18-foot cryotank, filled with liquid hydrogen and then pressurized with relevant fly loads, is undergoing testing for temperature, pressure, and stress in its relevant space environment.

Huntsville and RSA, from a technological perspective, have the most advanced manufacturing skills and expertise in working with composite design materials, to test a new component of this size and inimitability.

Straight from NASA's Space Technology Game Changing Development Program, the Cryotank and its composite makeup are the future in air and space missions.

Raytheon's New Missile Integration Expansion

The $75 million, 70,000-square-foot Raytheon Redstone Missile Integration Facility located near Gate 3 underwent its first expansion in March 2014, adding a new test cell meant to increase capacity and boost production in order to stay ahead of growing missile demand.

Raytheon uses robotic technology in the testing, integration, and final assembly of the Navy's sophisticated Standard Missile-3, part of the Missile Defense Agency's (MDA) sea-based Aegis Ballistic Missile Defense; and in the Standard Missile-6 interceptors, one of their anti-air warfare missiles.

that manufactures missiles on the arsenal, and the facility has continued to create about 300 jobs over the past couple of years. The expansion of the state-of-the-art facility will allow for a 30 percent increase in Raytheon's production capabilities. They now have three test cells in operation with a fourth coming online in the future.

Dream Chaser

MSFC has expanded its collaboration with Sierra Nevada Corporation (SNC) in the advanced planning and development of potential science research during future Dream Chaser spacecraft missions, SNC's multi-mission-capable spacecraft designed for low-Earth orbit.

Marshall's Mission Operations Laboratory will provide technical expertise for planning the integration of scientific payloads on the Dream Chaser spacecraft under their Advanced Development program. MSFC's decades of knowledge and expertise in payload development for space shuttle missions, as well as operating and maintaining science research on the ISS is the main reason for the extended alliance, which has been in effect for a couple of years.

Support for International Space Station

MSFC has led the design, testing, and development of the International Space Station (ISS) life support system known as ECLSS for over 20 years. These systems make it possible for people to survive in outer space.

These systems consist of the Wastewater Recovery System, which "recycles" wastewater into potable water; and the Oxygen Generation System, which provides breathable oxygen onboard the ISS, reducing the need to transport it, which is quite costly. Marshall engineers are currently designing and testing a new generation of life support systems as part of a project called Exploration Life Support systems. This involves developing hardware to remove carbon dioxide and humidity from the atmosphere of future crewed exploration vehicles, and developing and testing a wastewater processor that recovers a higher percentage of potable water from wastewater.

In 2001, MSFC began 24/7/365 staffing and support for the Payload Operations Integration Center (POIC) the command post for space station science for the Destiny laboratory onboard the ISS. Since the completion of the space station in 2011, MSFC has played a major role as crew science operations have accelerated. The ground crew in Huntsville works around-the-clock operating experiments and getting data to investigators.

According to Tracy McMahan, MSFC Public Affairs Specialist, as of the fall of 2013, the payload operations team had worked with investigators around the world to complete more than 1,600 investigations and new investigations are added during each six-month station expedition.

"We have been supporting some of these scientific experiments for many years and after more than a decade, this hard work is coming to fruition," McMahan said.

Collaboration, Research and Progress:

How Cummings Research Park is Connecting Industries and Touching the World

By Camille Platt

Once called "the crown jewel of Alabama's economic development assets" by Gov. Bob Riley, Cummings Research Park is helping high-tech enterprises transform their research into entrepreneurial success.

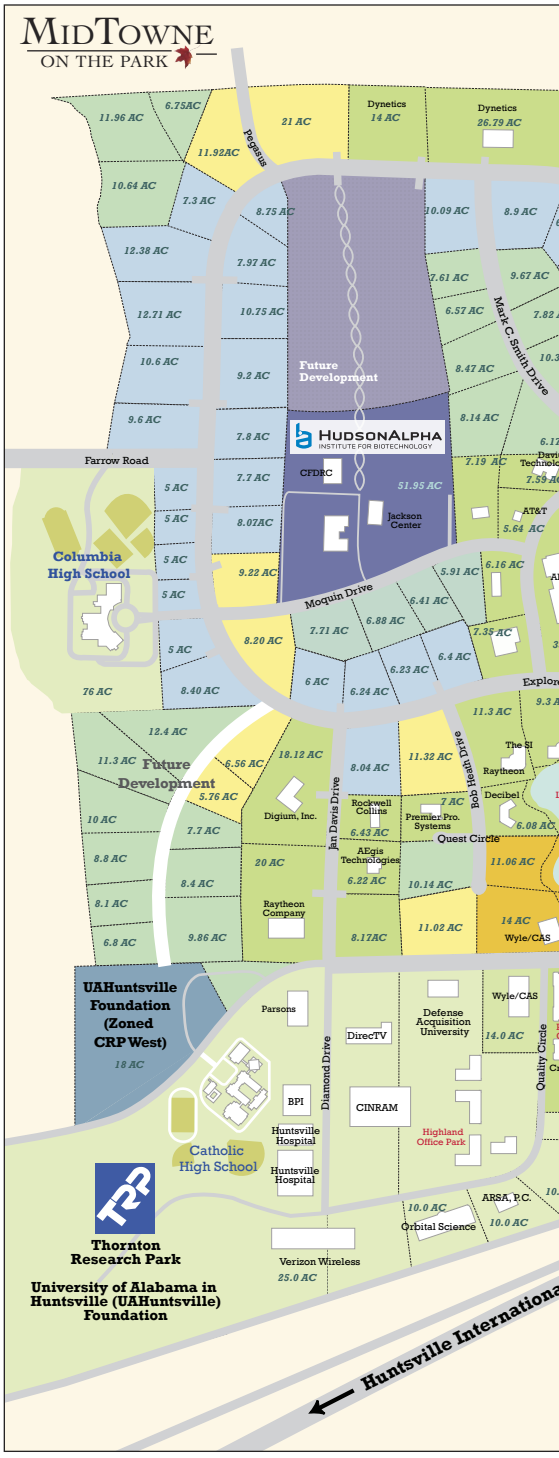
While the world was bracing itself for a full-on H1N1 influenza virus outbreak in 2009, Jian Han, M.D., Ph.D., of the HudsonAlpha Institute for Biotechnology huddled down in his laboratory in downtown Huntsville and came up with a diagnostic tool that would get patients the treatment they needed faster than ever before. To make the test available to hospitals, private doctor's offices and public health departments, he partnered with Diatherix, a clinical laboratory service located just steps from his office at Cummings Research Park (CRP). "You could literally scan the results from your blood work on an iPhone and send it out to anybody in the world, another doctor, at that patient's bedside, in real time, and they could get the right treatment at the right time," explained CRP Director John Southerland.

Dr. Jian Han.

HudsonAlpha Institute for Biotechnology



As HudsonAlpha scientists translate results from the Human Genome Project into individualized therapies for diseases, they collaborate with neighbors inside the park to turn their findings into commercial products. "One side of the building is research, the other side is for-profit companies that are taking research and productizing it," said Southerland. "The idea that they have shared spaces is a unique building tool in that you can't help but interact. So the idea behind the entire institute is to get personalized treatments to the patients faster than ever before."

CRP BEGINNINGS

In 1961, Dr. Wernher von Braun, Marshall Space Flight Center's first director, petitioned the Alabama State Legislature for a planned research park where academia, government and industry could work together to support manned space exploration. "We just never know what the next bit of information will bring forth," von Braun told his audience. "That's why we want to—and why we must—explore space. It's our next frontier, our newest challenge, and the greatest unknown today." With the funding approved, Brown Engineering President Milton K. Cummings asked his colleague Joe Moquin to find a new site for their business with enough acreage for other companies to buy from him at cost. Moquin chose a cotton field across from University of Alabama Huntsville Graduate Center, later the University of Alabama in Huntsville, and the park was born.

"From that start, it has grown from the first company—now Teledyne Brown Engineering—and the first anchor—the University of Alabama in Huntsville—to more than 300 companies and 29,000 employees," Southerland said. "Now it's the second largest research park in the country."

ADTRAN in Cummings Research Park.

Growth in the park was brisk in the 1960s; influenced by the space race, nearly 1,000 acres were developed by private companies. "CRP companies provided design, systems engineering and prototype manufacturing that carried man to the moon," said CRP Board Chairman Charlie Grainger, who was a reporter for The Birmingham News, present at von Braun's famous speech. "Then they provided the tools for design and development of complex missile defense programs that led to a successful end to the Cold War." Phase two of the park, CRP West, was launched in 1982.

Southerland explains that while space exploration primarily drove the park in the 1960s and 1970s, industries within CRP have since expanded to include the International Space Station, the Hubble Telescope, geotechnology, biotechnology, telecommunications, and modeling and simulation. Many people once attached to the space program were able to develop new technologies that could be transferred into the commercial sector. And that is what makes Southerland most excited about the park today.

Official portrait of Dr. Wernher von Braun. July 1, 1960 – Jan. 27, 1970

"One of the largest companies in Huntsville started out as Space Craft Inc. It became SCI Systems, the largest computer parts manufacturer in the world," Southerland said. "They were a NASA contractor, they commercialized the entire company, became huge, and they spun off several people who went on to do another thing." One of those individuals was Mark Smith, who met von Braun after winning a science fair at age 16 and spent three summers interning for him at NASA, later co-founding CRP West's ADTRAN, a leading global provider of networking and communications equipment.

> "Most of the research that has been done in the park has been in applied research, research that seeks to solve practical problems, as opposed to basic or pure research, which is executed without specific applications in mind," said Board Chairman Charlie Grainger.

RESEARCH-TO-BUSINESS SUCCESS

The collaboration between HudsonAlpha and Diatherix is just one example of how the modern day research being done at CRP has been productized and released into the market to change the world. Each industry within the park has its own stories of innovation and success. AEgis Technologies did modeling simulation work for the Olympics in China. Dynetics is working to get an aircraft with a rocket on it to deliver nanosatellites and microsatellites into lower orbit. CFD Research is building a bio-battery that turns glucose into energy.

Some of the work at CRP has even been capitalized on by Hollywood. In the 2010 movie Tron: Legacy, actors Jeff Bridges, Garrett Hudlund and Olivia Wilde wore black Spandex suits lit up by Light Tape® wired to battery packs in the magnetic discs on their backs. As the hues shifted from blue to orange to green, however, lighting specialists on set needed to be able to control the heat generated by the power source. Even with the room cooled to just 40-degrees Fahrenheit, the suits would get so hot that filming was limited to about eight minutes at a time.

Alan McFarland of lighting technology company Nila had attended a seminar in California about Huntsville-based Synapse Wireless and its SNAP® Network technology. During filming, Synapse provided wireless controls that could turn the suits on and off as well as confirm brightness, battery voltage, temperature and battery run-time from a remote location.

CARRYING THE TORCH

Grainger said the vision of the research park's founders has been transferred over the years to community and city leaders who have picked up where Cummings left off. They created a park where "success succeeded success, where leading space and defense companies congregated, and where aspiring start-up companies aspired to locate. Our job over the last quarter century has been to keep their dream alive by maintaining the high quality that led CRP to become one of America's economic crown jewels."

60 Years of Small Business Technology Shows No Signs of Slowing Down

By Kimberly Ballard

For over 60 years, Huntsville's proud heritage as a complex problem-solver has assured that the City, along with its strategic engineering capabilities, stays ahead of technology while remaining an integral part of it. From modeling and simulation, designing and integrating large composite systems, managing cyber security, developing innovative communications, and exploring clean energy options, here are a few good reasons why Techie.com named Huntsville among the top 10 Most Promising U.S. Tech Hubs to watch in 2014.

Cyber Security

Moved by a speech on the threats of cyber warfare, Huntsville Mayor Tommy Battle came away with an ingenious idea. Since Huntsville was already teeming with the world's brightest degreed engineers and computer systems experts, who better to take on the challenges of cyber security?

"It is a perfect fit for our workforce," he said. "It comes down to Huntsville's economic and intellectual appeal. We are already doing systems engineering, design, modeling, simulation, research and development, and testing. Huntsville has the fourth highest level of security clearances in the country; performs on a daily basis, some of the most complex and high level computer computations used by the U.S. Army; and has for more than 60 years been a leader in cutting-edge technology. I see it as a long-term economic development issue."

Huntsville Mayor Tommy Battle.

Since the announcement of his Cyber Huntsville Initiative, the North Alabama Cyber Summit has grown to more than 650 attendees and exhibitors. Today, that initiative has developed a "Why Huntsville for Cyber Missions" presentation for government leaders to raise the awareness of Huntsville's cyber capabilities with the intent of developing an Indefinite Quantify Indefinite Delivery (IQID) contract to make it easy to bring cyber-related work to North Alabama.

Members of the Initiative are also planning a second Table Top Exercise to test community response to Cyber-attacks; creating endowed teaching positions for cyber and implementing a Cyber curriculum developed by the U. S. Army Aviation and Missile Research Development and Engineering Center (AMRDEC), in the Huntsville City School System. They also fielded a Cyber Team who came in second at the National Competition; and established an Education Initiative between UAH, Cyber Huntsville, and the 8th Alabama District.

Companies like Huntsville's DESE Research and Noetic Strategies specialize in cyber security research and development, while Aleta Technologies and Intelligent Decisions provide cost-effective cyber security and other cyber support services to federal agencies and commercial customers.

Energy

Huntsville knows that the greatest challenge facing the nation is the exploration, conservation, and generation of energy. Mayor Tommy Battle's Energy Huntsville Initiative "promotes the growth of clean and renewable energy, energy efficiency and energy security."

The scope of Huntsville's technological input in the energy industry will eventually rival Huntsville's defense and space work.

From Intergraph Corporation's engineering software that helps with the design, construction and operation of plants, ships, and offshore oil and gas facilities, as well as helping oil and gas refineries eliminate plant shutdowns and comply with federal regulations; to Teledyne Brown's work in nuclear and deep-sea oil exploration, are just a few of the energy technologies coming out of Huntsville.

Huntsville's American Wind Technologies' micro wind turbines and Nexus Energy Center's clean energy strategies are all utilizing technology to bring public and private sectors together to provide accessible, high quality energy solutions and improvements that save money and create new jobs.

Entrepreneurial EcoSystems

Huntsville abounds with entrepreneurial eco systems and technology hubs that are providing infrastructure and resources to encourage and support the birth of new ideas and the growth of technology-related small business.

Dr. John Whitman, the Innovation, Commercialization, and Entrepreneurship (ICE) lab director at the University of Alabama Huntsville (UAH) was one of the first to catch on to the supportive eco systems idea when he started HOTCoffee, Huntsville's fastest growing ecosystem for innovation and entrepreneurship. Inspired by Huntsville's legacy of innovation and reputation, HOTCoffee has embraced as its mantra: Innovate Hard, Live Easy. They offer an open invitation to anyone interested in technology startups to join them every other Friday morning at the UAH business school to discuss their needs, share news and brainstorm ideas with like-minded folks.

The Women's Business Center of North Alabama (WBCNA) embraces technology-related entrepreneurship. According to executive director Joanne Randolph, "We have dozens of senior-level, top-tier executives willing to volunteer their time as advisors to help people get a technology business started and to help them grow."

One area where Randolph believes Huntsville has a lot of potential is in mining and commercializing pent-up technologies. "The government has a long list of problems that need solving, and they offer grant money in the form of SBIRs (Small Business Innovation Research) to find solutions. The WBCNA is part of an effort to push innovators towards SBIRs and encourage people with special expertise and skills to submit proposals. We will even show you how to write white papers, show Proof of Concept, develop proposals, and if accepted, use the grant money to develop those technologies for commercialization."

BizTech, Huntsville's first technology incubator, has now reached out beyond technology to provide guidance to entrepreneurs in the early stages of developing ideas or inventions into marketable assets. If accepted into the incubator, BizTech will nurture that concept with office space, developmental and marketing guidance, and business support. Graduating from the BizTech incubator means new technology is ready for integration into the marketplace.

In May 2014, BizTech launched a Vertically Integrated Business Ecosystem known as The VIBE Downtown. Following the concept of "coworking" or sharing a work environment with a combination of shared desks and open space intended to promote collaborative relationships, Jonathan Pease, director of marketing and community relations for BizTech said VIBE is a hybrid between a co-working space, Internet café, and relaxed, lounge-style atmosphere.

The Small Business Development Center (SBDC) at UAH is a mentor, consultant, trainer, and matchmaker for potential new technology-related small business owners. According to SBDC's director, Foster Perry, "Some of these entrepreneurs are developing software and getting involved in biomedical research, energy production, and telecommunications." He said UAH and Cummings Research Park are primed for a college student with an innovative invention or entrepreneurs with clever ideas. "When someone comes to the SBDC with an idea or invention, we have graduate students who help test their ideas, do the research and perform market opportunity analyses."

Professional Organizations

Founded in the 1990s so small, one and two-man companies have opportunities to meet the movers and shakers of large technology companies and government agencies that will enable them to grow and become successful, the Huntsville Association of Small Businesses in Advanced Technology (HASBAT) today consists of 175 organizations. Made up of technology-related small businesses, HASBAT provides a platform on which smaller companies can mesh their technological capital with more diverse technological capital than their own, to get contracts that will grow their small businesses.

According to Phil Carey, vice president of Army Programs at Wavelink Inc. and HASBAT's president for the past five years, the organization is all about developing relationships. "In Huntsville, you have a world of small businesses that are providing technology services and products used around the globe. Small business is the engine that drives any local economy and that is especially true in Huntsville. It is imperative that when legislators create policy, they understand the potential impact their decisions have on small businesses."

There are hundreds of new start-ups with unique skills and capabilities forming every

Services for Small Businesses

The Chamber of Commerce of Huntsville/Madison County is one of the first stops people make when they want to start or expand a company. That's one of the most traditional roles the Chamber takes in fulfilling its mission statement: Prepare, Develop and Promote our community for economic growth.

"We provide information and tools to people wanting to start their own technology business—or any kind of small business, actually—and we help our Members who are looking to grow or improve a business that is already up and running," said the Chamber's Director of Small Business & Events, Pammie Jimmar.

"And we provide a networking platform as well as some amazing professional development opportunities in a compressed schedule because we recognize that time is one of the most precious resources for small business owners."

Professional development includes human resources and finance training, two areas that scientific minds looking to become entrepreneurs can utilize. Also, the Chamber will organize ground-breaking and ribbon-cutting ceremonies for Members' milestone events.

Banker Louis Michetti (top) leads a "financially fit" training series for Members. Above, Small Business Training Series cover a wide array of topics. Ribbon cuttings, such as this Trideum event (top right), are a great way to celebrate the milestones of Member companies. Business leaders and government officials often attend ground-breaking ceremonies for Chamber Members (lower right, the VA groundbreaking).

Participation in CEO Roundtables can help new executives find mentors who have been-there, done-that with growing their businesses.

Networking events include Breakfast and Biz, where Member companies can interact with possible new clients, and Business After Hours—including get-togethers for only those tenants in Cummings Research Park.

"Innovation is a key factor in Huntsville and Madison County's success, and the Chamber is honored to play a role in supporting that innovation through our Small Business services," Jimmar said. For more infomration, contact her at pjimmar@hsvchamber.org.

year. "There are many dynamics at play in doing business with the Federal Government," Carey said. "It is very difficult to gain a full understanding of what is required. We have monthly senior-level speakers or briefers from more established companies who share information and opportunities with newer, smaller companies."

Joe Yearta, director of Solvability at Decosimo and chairman of the HASBAT Government Affairs Committee said the association has provided great networking and educational opportunities for Decosimo and many other small to medium-sized businesses here in Huntsville. "Remember, small business is truly the pulse and heartbeat of our local economy and they are to be valued as a whole. Our company specializes in cost accounting solutions and federal contract compliance consulting so we work every day with small business contractors."

The Huntsville Association of Technical Societies, formerly known as HATS but recently changed its name to The Association, has been providing information, coordination and networking opportunities to anyone interested in the advancement of science and engineering since 1969. The Association awards the Joseph Moquin Award to a Professional of the Year who stands out above their peers through involvement, exemplary leadership and a long-standing commitment to the North Alabama technical community.

Biotechnology

An incubator starts with an undiscovered idea or concept. Jim Hudson said he prefers the word "accelerator" for his Hudson-Alpha Institute of Biotechnology. "We take a big, established idea that has some level of success, and accelerate its validity through research and experimentation."

Hudson played a key role in the breakthrough mapping of human DNA and put Huntsville on the map as a leader in biotechnology. He believes the best way to have scientific ideas make a difference in our world is to get them out into the marketplace through private companies. "The Institute's open-air design in which CEOs and investigators overlook the lobby from glassed-in offices creates an interactive atmosphere and promotes a 'can-do' spirit that encourages research, sharing ideas, talking to one another, and creating collaborative tools to help each other."

While Hudson-Alpha is connecting the dots between genetics and hereditary diseases, Clearview Cancer Institute is one of only three cancer-testing sites in the world. Their search for a cure to cancer using molecular therapy or nuclear therapeutic medicine is unprecedented.

Other Huntsville biotech innovators include EGEN, a clinical stage biopharmaceutical company focused on developing nucleic acid-based therapeutics for cancer and other hard-to-treat diseases using proprietary nanoparticle delivery systems; and Conversant Bio who seeks to improve human health by connecting patients, medical professionals, and the research community to catalyze breakthrough research and novel therapeutic solutions.

Huntsville: A New Home Buyer's Market

By Kimberly Ballard

Applications for new homebuilding permits are soaring. Interest rates are still at an all-time low. Property taxes in Madison County are some of the lowest in the country. Dozens of residential subdivisions spanning a variety of price ranges are sprouting up in key parts of Huntsville, Madison and the surrounding suburbs. According to the American Chamber of Commerce Research Association's Photos of the Village of Providence.

(ACCRA) Cost of Living Index, Huntsville's housing index is about 81 percent of the national average, significantly lower than that of major metropolitan cities and comparable technological hubs. With facts like those, it is no wonder Huntsville ranked as one of the Most Optimistic Cities in America, based on the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index.

According to Bill Stewart, president of the Huntsville Area Association of Realtors (HAAR), newcomers quickly change their buying parameters once they get here. "The average homebuyer approaches buying a house with a set of criteria based on what they need and what they think they can afford," Stewart said. "Those parameters are based on where they are moving from, but for people who move here from anywhere in New England, California, even as nearby as Virginia, they tend to evolve as they look at homes here in the Valley. They can buy a lot bigger house with more amenities than they could in most metropolitan cities, and it doesn't take long for them to see and understand that."

"Nine-foot ceilings, granite countertops, crown moldings, and upgraded contemporary chef-style kitchens with double ovens are among the amenities for under $100-per-square-foot with other comforts like whirlpool tubs." With $100 to $150-per-square-foot being the watershed for most custom homes in just about any market in the country, newcomers to Huntsville will find real value.

A higher quality of life at a lower cost of living also paves the way for people who wish to build their own home. "Here is what people can expect when they move to the Tennessee Valley and decide to build a home," said Mark Rovere of Action Builders, Inc. and president of the Huntsville/Madison County Homebuilders Association (HMCHBA). "You can build a custom home with a floor plan that best meets your family's needs in a variety of price ranges in a part of the city that best suits your lifestyle. You will find lower energy costs and lower property taxes than in most cities Huntsville's size. You can build a high-tech home with dozens of amenities and new products that are energy efficient under Alabama's new energy Code. No matter where you build inside Madison County, you have a short commute to work; and you are within 50 miles of several state parks for camping, hiking, and picnicking; with the Tennessee River at your backdoor for boating, waterskiing, and fishing."

"You cannot play down the economic significance of having the largest population of college-degreed residents and more engineers per capita than any city in the country," said Rise Real Estate managing broker Walt Hennessee. "We have great City leadership and we are unified in a plan to keep the quality of living high with plenty of arts and music, sports, shopping, and culture; but as I have heard Mayor Tommy Battle say many times, we are also committed to keeping taxes low. To give you an example, we recently disclosed to a new homebuyer our estimated property taxes on their new home. When I told them $1,500, the buyer said, 'That's a little higher than I was expecting. Fifteen hundred dollars a month is a lot!' and I had to break it to them that it was $1,500 for the year, not month!"

Hennessee also said with no taxes on retirement income, many people who have lived here before but moved because they were transferred somewhere else for a job, come back here to retire or to start a business. Forbes magazine confirmed this last year when they ranked Huntsville among the 25 Best Places to Retire.

Sandra Lowrey, managing broker for Re/MAX Distinctive said their average home sale is a 1,600-square-foot, 3-bedroom, 2-bath brick rancher in the $175,000 range. "Schools and resell values are among the most common questions newcomers ask when they move here," she said. "We attempt to get them approved before they get here to save time and to give them a better shot at bidding on a home." She continued, "If they want, we take them on a tour of the City, but we have so many great areas that may be of interest to families with school-aged children, we try to help them narrow it down. Once we get them interested in this area or that, we encourage them to go to GreatSchools.org and score the schools in those neighborhoods and decide which best fit their expectations."

According to HAAR statistics, in 2013, Huntsville Area Home Sales totaled 9,954 with an average selling price of $164,320.

Madison County Nature Trail

Located atop Green Mountain in southeast Huntsville, high above the noise of the city, a mood of quiet tranquility envelopes the 72 acre park. Open free to the public each day from seven in the morning until thirty minutes prior to sunset, this convenient escape from urban life encompasses Sky Lake, a 1.5 mile walking trail, pavilion, chapel, picnic tables, covered bridge and accessible restrooms.

#5 Burritt on the Mountain

Burritt on the Mountain has been referred to as a "Jewel on the Mountain." Start with Dr. William Henry Burritt's eclectic mansion, add a historic park with restored 19th century houses including barnyard and animals, and finally throw in the artistic side with concerts, plays and exhibits, and you have a delightful mixture of old and new for young and old!

Electromagnetic Spectrum Exhibit

Sci-Quest Hands-on Science Center is the perfect place to ignite a child's imagination. With a wide variety of hands-on exhibits and experiences, many exclusive to Sci-Quest, learning is made fun through hands-on activities. Whether you want to predict the local forecast on a real TV weather station and green screen or take a wild trip through the human body with Grossology, Sci-Quest has something for everyone.

Von Braun Center

The Von Braun Center is a multipurpose facility located in downtown Huntsville. The VBC offers multiple venues for presenting cultural, educational, entertainment, sporting and social events.

#8 The EarlyWorks Family of Museums

Alabama Constitution Village

Three museums—one incredible adventure!

Civil War soldiers, a Talking Tree, and whimmy diddles—see them all at the EarlyWorks Family of Museums: Alabama Constitution Village, the Huntsville Depot and Museum, and EarlyWorks Children's History Museum.

These three museums in the heart of historic downtown Huntsville will take you on a journey back in time. Experience history in unique settings such as a 46-foot keel boat, an 1860's era depot or the cabinet shop where delegates met to discuss and draft the constitution for statehood in 1819.

Big Spring International Park (also known as Big Spring Park) is located in downtown Huntsville. The park is built around its namesake "Big Spring," the original water source that the city of Huntsville was built around. The park is also notable as the venue for the Panoply Arts Festival, held the last full weekend in April.

#10 Twickenham Historic District

This district is a living museum of American architectural styles dating from 1814. It encompasses about one-half of the original Town of Twickenham, Huntsville's first official name.

University of Alabama Lowe House.

Visitors tour one of the houses open for tours during the Twickenham Historic Preservation District Association home tours.

The aim of the Weeden House Museum is to illustrate family life in the 1840s, to present the fine architectural features of this Federal style house and to share the life of Maria Howard Weeden, world famous poet and watercolorist.

Blending sustainability with history brings new life to downtown Huntsville

Street musicians in the square.

by Kimberly Ballard

Downtown Huntsville is a truly diverse urban community. It successfully intermingles history with contemporary arts and culture; manages a vibrant nightlife with an energetic, vital workforce; and embraces technology, inspires commerce, and encourages unanimity.

According to Downtown Huntsville, Inc.'s CEO Chad Emerson, Huntsville had become by default, a suburban-centric city, but his 501(C)(6) organization along with partnerships with local developers, retail store owners and restaurateurs, event coordinators, and city leaders, etc., have committed to creating a vibrant, diverse and economically sustainable downtown.

"When you look at successful historic cities that are comparable to Huntsville like Charleston, SC; Savannah, GA; Raleigh, NC; Chattanooga, TN—they all have a healthy, growing, dynamic downtown," he explained.

Downtown Huntsville provides a quality of life experience that includes a healthy mixture of arts, history, excellent food, contemporary urban housing, outdoor music festivals and entertainment, shady sidewalks, urban biking and hiking, and a busy marketplace for shopping, inventing and living. These advantages make the city a viable competitor for a young, dynamic workforce.

Historic Big Spring & Twickenham Square

From the time John Hunt founded "Twickenham" in 1805, life centered on the Historic City Square, graced on its West-side corner by a bank Jesse James either did, or didn't (according to who you talk to!) attempt to rob. Along its East side lies an underground spring the Cherokee and Chickasaw Indians called "Big Spring" and from which a tranquil but bustling park has emerged. From concerts in the Park; to UAH's annual LIT (Light + Innovation + Technology) event showing how the collision of arts with engineering produces an overall enlightenment; to Panoply, the Southeast's premier arts weekend sponsored by The Arts Council every spring—there is something going on year round at Big Spring Park.

The Huntsville Museum of Art (HMA), Early Works Children's Museum, and a variety of historic attractions like Constitution Village and the Huntsville Railway Depot and Roundhouse provide ongoing cultural reenactments, tours, and sponsored events. The HMA's fundraising foundation has introduced unique events like the City's first outdoor ice-skating rink bringing a Christmas-in-Manhattan feel to Big Spring Park; and they even trucked in 400 tons of sand to replicate a beach-like landscape on the 200-yard section of Fountain Circle behind the Early Works Children's Museum for the Rocket City Beach Bash.

From June through August, live music is played at the Downtown Huntsville Sounds of Summer in the Square. Every Thursday, dozens of local vendors sell everything from produce to handmade soap at the Greene Street Market, just a block off the Square. Summer events include Putt-Putt on the Square at the Downtown Open; and the Quigley Arts and Entertainment District's annual Sidewalk Arts Stroll features 60 artists, artisans, and entertainers sharing and displaying their work and talents in the sidewalk marketplace set up along Gates Avenue and Franklin Streets, winding through Constitution Village. Whet your appetite at Street Food Season as more than a dozen food trucks camp out around the Views of Downtown from the skyline to the Square and Big Spring Park.

Square with free, live music April through October; bring your own or borrow wheels and take a ride through the City Center during the Thursday Night Bike events. Come watch the kids solve a mystery during Box Car Days.

Eat, Drink, Shop

Dozens of restaurants and craft beer breweries located downtown and in Five Points sponsor food and drink gatherings like Behind the Scenes, the Downtown Street Food Gathering, and the All-American Food Truck & Craft Beer Rally. There are networking events like Downtown with the Rocket City Bloggers (RCB). Many eateries hold holiday events like Humphrey's Cinco De Mayo Celebrity Margarita Mixing Contest, and Straight to Ale Brewery's Anti-Valentine's Day Party. There are holiday celebrations and parades in the streets, and recognition ceremonies at the Veterans Memorial. Choose from distinctive dining at Cotton Row, The Eaves, Commerce Kitchen, and the 1892 East Restaurant and Tavern; or enjoy casual cuisine from D'Licous Dining & Smokehouse Grill, Pane e Vino, The Office Breakroom & Bar, and A Cup of Everything.

Sitting on the southside corner of the Historic Square is the iconic Harrison Brothers Hardware, built in 1897 as a dry goods store. The store retains its original appearance but the merchandise is pure miscellany with regional and local arts and crafts, contemporary housewares, locally published cookbooks and travel logs; edibles; handmade jewelry and pottery; and toys both new and vintage.

The Railroad Station Antique Mall has three floors of independent vendors, the largest collection of sterling silver in North Alabama, and their very own Civil War-era ghost.

Downtown shopping got a boost from the Clinton Row Project, located at the corner of Clinton and Jefferson Streets where startup companies are converting metal storage units into fashionable retail space, a la NYC's Warehouse and Soho Districts of the 1970s and 1980s. Artists, unique retailers and innovators are occupying the 10' x 10' spaces at affordable rates.

Tastefully decorated every year for the holidays, downtown Huntsville offers numerous local, national and traveling shows, musicals and sporting events at the Von Braun Center. Both Santa's Village and the Tinsel Trail are open through January 1 every year.

Tech Hub

Answering the need for the popular new concept known as entrepreneurial eco systems, which provide infrastructure, resources, and support to entrepreneurs, the tech community congregates at VIBE Downtown on Northside Square where they will find a cup of hot coffee and a shared work environment intended to promote collaborative relationships. NASA held a NASA on the Square event to keep people apprised of what is happening in the industry that made Huntsville famous.

Quality Living

Twickenham is Alabama's oldest antebellum district. Together with Old Town and Five Points, a crossroads where five streets converge into a single intersection, the homeowner or renter will find diversity and convenience in urban living. Downtown-dwellers have a choice of a 150-year-old historic home, a quaint open-space bungalow, or any number of fixer-uppers for the so-inclined.

The Artisan Lofts at Twickenham Square and the Belk-Hudson Lofts offer large, airy, contemporary space adaptable to any lifestyle. Several former commercial high-rise buildings have converted their space into stylish high-rise apartments and condominiums like 301 East, Lincoln Square, and the Terry Hutchens Condominiums.

Greene Street Market

by Kimberly Ballard

Inspired by Father Andy Anderson of Huntsville's Church of the Nativity, downtown Huntsville's Greene Street Market is a popular producer-only outdoor farmer's market for buying fresh, locally grown fruits and vegetables, fresh herbs, and flowers. Coordinated by market director Marilyn Evans on behalf of Nativity, nearly 50 vendors set up their stalls on Nativity grounds encircling Greene and Eustis Streets every Thursday 4 until 8 p.m. from May until October.

Located just a block east of the Square, all of the beef, pork, chicken and eggs are organically grown, while some vendors offer pre-prepared meals, gourmet popsicles, traditionally made relishes, pickles, cheeses, preserves, jams, honey, and homemade breads, cakes, candy and cookies.

Huntsville's Green Mountain Soap has all-natural, locally made alternative soaps.

Many local artisans offer handcrafted jewelry, baskets, artwork and clothing. Greene Street is a great place to buy healthy plants and flowers that haven't been overdosed with fertilizer.

At Children's Corner, kids under 12 can make "Veggie Prints", paint reusable bags, play with bubbles, draw with sidewalk chalk and horse around the Spoiled Rockin' Kidz Salon booth.

The Market is free to attend and there is plenty of music and atmosphere.

Live music at Sidewalk Arts Stroll.

WHAT WORKS REGIONALISM

There's no shortage of good ideas here

SHELLY HASKINS
I am the director for community news for AL.com in Huntsville. Contact shaskins@al.com

If I learned one thing from Wednesday night's "What Works: Regionalism" forum at AL.com's downtown hub, it's that people here have no shortage of good ideas if you give them a chance to talk about them.

More than 100 people showed up and weren't afraid to throw out their ideas for making North Alabama a better place, without worrying about what might stand in the way. Take that "but that won't work, because" factor away, and it's pretty freeing.

Some examples from the group I led, which brainstormed ideas for developing the local riverfront: A revolving restaurant, regional water sports competitions, a zip-line/ropes course, a farmers/fish market, food truck events at Ditto Landing, paddleboats, a resort hotel, a triathalon, a riverfront ballpark.

For transportation: A railway from downtown to Ditto Landing, public transportation inside Redstone Arsenal, smartphone apps that tell you the best traffic routes, providing incentives for taking public transit, service shuttles dedicated to the medical district.

There were great ideas too about improving fire protection, from creating a metro fire department with paid firefighters, to using "predictive analytics" technology to analyze the areas that need the most resources. To quote Assistant District Attorney Jason Scully-Clemons, who reported out for the fire protection group, "It tells you something about our town when our 'exciting' idea starts with the term 'predictive analytics.'"

Boring terms or not, the ideas were exciting. Building out the entire area with high-speed broadband Internet, creating an "emerald necklace" of greenways surrounding and connecting Madison County and surrounding areas, building a major planetarium/science center that could draw tourists and highlight our area's specialties in space science and technology, link Huntsville's local tourist attractions around the "hub" of the U.S. Space & Rocket Center, providing ways for people visiting one to easily get to the next.

We asked our participants to vote on the ideas they found most exciting, and the ones they thought would be most achievable. Consider these two lists, then go to AL.com/Huntsville to vote for the project you think is most exciting for North Alabama, and the project you think is most achievable, or you can fill in and cut out the ballot below and mail it to me.

We'll tally the votes and come back soon with a report on the projects you chose to be the most exciting and the most achievable. Then we'll move forward, deciding what regional priority Alabama Media Group will champion.
